SAKURA TERRACE

A new CLT constructed A-frame bessoji in the hills above Atami Station

Part of a larger network of rentable holiday homes, and a development in Izu Peninsula, this cabin is the first constructed a-frame, operating as an AirBNB hotel.

High in the hills above Atami, the A-frame is constructed from cross-laminated timber making it's construction and assembly easier on difficult sites

The form of the cabin is a traditional a-frame that is opened on its Southern aspect to provide light, sun and views of the cascading greenery that creates a sense of privacy and retreat.

An outdoor bath and sauna provide a sense of luxury and a means of communing with nature.

THE RECORDS

Renovation of an old business hotel into a community food hall with coworking spaces, outdoor bar and rooftop teppanyaki

Sitting at the southeast corner of Chiba Koen, a former business hotel has been repurposed as a commercial and community hub.

Taking the idea of extending the greenery of Chiba Koen through an existing parking space at the base of the building, the design aims to create a sense of public commons.

Almost like a series of park kiosks with a central eating space, a bakery, bar, and italian restaurant share back-of-house space with a common design language of green-tiles and stainless steel that frame the space.

A double height atrium leads to second floor work space and an outdoor bar with views across the park and beyond.

GLAS BRAE HOUSE

A three-story private residence for a young couple in Governor's Bay, New Zealand

A steep section with limited access in the small settlement of Governor's Bay provides a challenging site with panoramic views of Lyttleton Harbour

Conceived as a small three tiered pagoda tumbling down the steep section, the small house consists of three volumes: an anchored garage, mid-level bedrooms, and floating living space.

Wide-slung eaves and walk-on roofs create a sense of overlapping space where interior and exterior flow into one another, gathering around dramatic views and providing protection from the natural elements.

Between these volumes a hill-side track winds up from the site arrival to the living volume on top where large glass sliders connect outdoor living spaces at each end of the floor plate.

IWAI OMOTESANDO

Wedding chapel, reception, office and accommodation facility for Crazy Wedding

Crazy Wedding, a popular wedding planning company founded in 2002, opened its flagship venue in the fashionable Omotesando, Aoyama in 2019.

“IWAI” means ”celebration” in Japanese and this venue gets its name from client’s belief of the intrinsic celebration – gathering together, spending quality time – and is meant for them to represent the excellence of the celebrating act itself.

Based around the experience of movement associated with Japanese tea ceremony, an existing pair of nondescript low-rise office buildings have been strategically and sensitively refurbished to generate a sequence of bold yet related interiors that support the journey of each couple.

TINY GARDEN

Renovation of a ryokan, campsite and cabins next to Tateshina lake in Nagano

A once popular ryokan and campsite, since fallen into disrepair was acquired by a Tokyo-based fashion brand with the intent to refurbish as the base for a new outdoor label.

The existing ryokan has been simply refurbished with a new cafe/restaurant, several hotel rooms, and an apparel shop that opens fully to the dramatic forest landscape.

A series of floating decks connects the ryokan to a new work-house, with an equipment hire area, commercial kitchen and co-working facility - intended to be used by company employees and for public hire as Japan moves to adopt new modes of work and lifestyle.

The decks and walkways cascade down the site to an auto-camp area, and finally a series of small retro cabins that have been insulated and updated to accomodate small groups and families.

HATTO CAFE

A cafe and apparel factory renovation in Jingumae where creation and production are combined in a single setting.

In the ground floor tenancy of a building that sits at the corner of a four-way intersection, the cafe space was treated as a continuation of two smaller city parks that sit on the opposite side of the road.

Intended as a raw and versatile space, the idea of the interior was to create a strong visual connection between the cafe - a space of rest and creativity - and the print-to-order business that sits in the back area.

We created an open square with moveable tables to accommodate large functions and exhibitions. All fixed elements are positioned to the rear and side of the space to allow for maximum flexibility.

EN STUDIO

Commercial photography studio in Toyosu

HAKUHODO PRODUCT'S INC. is the promotion production arm of one of the largest Japanese PR companies. With over twenty professional photographers among their staff, we were approached to design a stimulating and functional dedicated environment for them in an old logistics warehouse in Toyosu.

The studio is located in an industrial area with many warehouses and logistic companies adjacent to a series of residential towers. Our approach was to respect this context and generate a hybrid industrial/domestic space, that combined textured and natural finishes with the strong existing steel shell and space-frame structure required for the giant CYC screen.

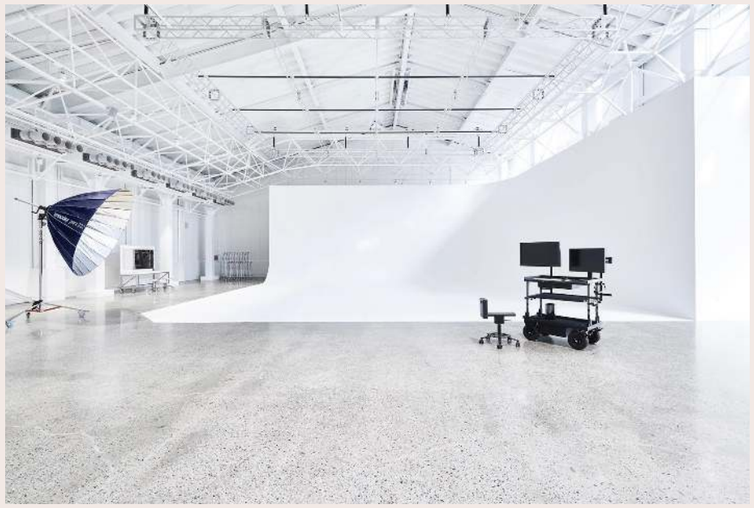

There are two photography studios, large and small; a generous reception area with a gallery showing previous projects; guest rooms; makeup rooms; a kitchen cafe and a bar.

TABI LABO

Office relocation and co-working space for an expanding travel company

Tabi-Labo, a popular media company that manages enterprise brand communications, wished to relocate their operations into a 1980s office building in Ikejiri, Setagaya City.

Consisting of two-floors of offices for staff, and an open co-working / event space , the renovation is designed to encourage collaboration with people both inside and outside of the company.

The second floor entry space is reached via an exterior staircase, from which you can enter directly to this shared space. Here you can find a coffee kiosk, a kitchen for employees, a display space and meeting rooms, without traditional borders.

The approach involves trying to capture the Tabi-labo spirit of DIY in it's stripped back aesthetic with practical, low-cost detailing. Equally, this ethos is presented through showcasing functions such as the shared kitchen where staff make lunch for one another daily.

SENDOMACHI RESIDENCE

Renovation of a 90 year old, wooden house in Saiki in Oita Prefecture

Born into a family of malted rice makers who have been in business for over 300 years, the client decided to create a residence with an office that serves as a hub for creating new activities, gathering together with the locals to revive the bustle of the town.

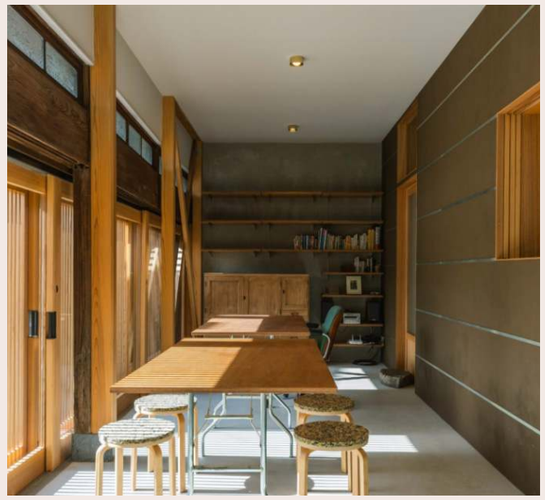

The distinctive feature of the house are its earthen floor and beautiful wooden beams above the atrium space. A dirt floor (tori-doma), connecting the entrance and the back yard provides a space to work and meetings, also can be used for events or seminars for locals by opening the sliding doors.

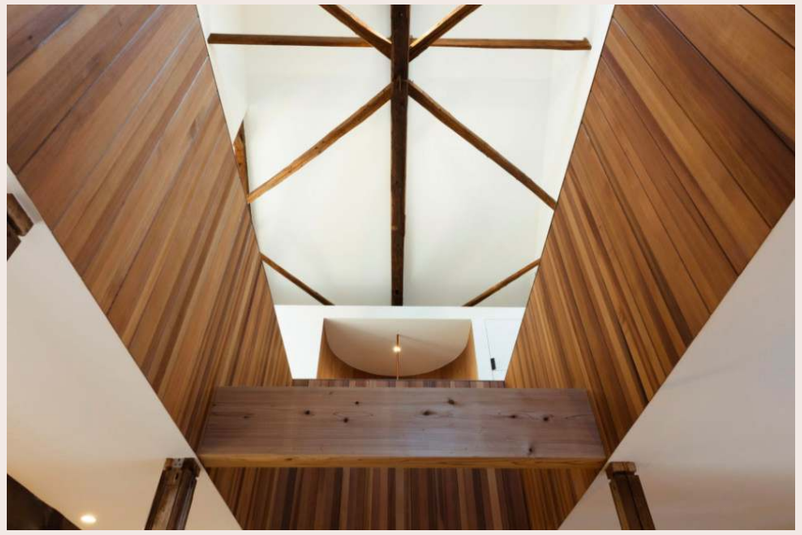

In the raised floor area there are the kitchen and dining room, which are the heart of the family's living space. The kitchen faces the tori-doma so that a lively scene of the family adds life to the office, and to the road front road.
